BIG LAZY, New York City's gritty instrumental trio has flourished for over 20 years, creating film music and playing its singular brand of guitar noir and highway twang from the Whitney Museum of American Art to the Opéra National de Lyon. Simultaneously noir and pastoral, gothic and modern, the trio conjures images from big sky country to seedy back rooms with cinematic clarity. Combining elements of Blues, Rockabilly, Surf and Jazz with a fiery performance style, their most recent album, Dear Trouble, captures the essence of their legendary live shows.

STEPHEN ULRICH, guitarist and Big Lazy founder has released his first solo album Music from This American Life. The album is a collection of 10 pieces Ulrich was commissioned to write for Ira Glass' iconic radio program of the same name. Ulrich is also known for composing the soundtrack for the HBO series Bored To Death.

On November 10th at John and Peter's Big Lazy will perform music from their 6 studio albums as well Music from This American Life.

"The Big Apple Crème de la Crème." Robert Christgau – dean of American rock critics

"Big Lazy, the elegantly gritty instrumental trio led by the extraordinary guitarist Stephen Ulrich, plays stunningly beautiful music that evokes everything from truckers' romps to the haunting film scores of Bernard Herrmann." The New Yorker
